

Center for South Asian and Middle Eastern Studies
presents:

NO PLACE CALLED HOME

A play giving voice to Iraqi refugees

Kim Schultz is the playwright and actress of No Place Called Home, a one-woman play based on the vignettes of Iraqi refugees living in Jordan, Lebanon and Syria. In 2009, Schultz and Amikaeyla Gaston were part of a delegation of American artists who met with hundreds of refugees at community centers and in their homes. Upon their return, the artists began creating a series of artistic pieces designed to humanize the crisis and give voice to the millions of refugees whose plight has yet to enter broad public consciousness. No Place Called Home is a result of this effort.

WHEN Friday, Oct. 14, 7:00 pm

WHERE Music Building Auditorium,
1114 W. Nevada St., Urbana

*This event is free and open to the public.
Discussion will follow the performance.*

Written and performed by Kim Schultz
With music by Amikaeyla Gaston
Directed by Sarah Cameron Sunde
Commissioned by Intersections International

CO-SPONSORED BY Religion, School of Music, Cline Center for Democracy, Sociology, History, School of Literatures, Cultures and Linguistics; Women and Gender in Global Perspectives Program, Program in Jewish Culture and Society, Theatre, Political Science, Unit for Criticism and Interpretive Theory

University of Illinois at Urbana Champaign

